WHAT CAN I DO TO HELP?

Our pets need a consistent routine and steady environment to feel comfortable. Even changes that you consider positive can be disruptive for your pet and sometimes lead to unwanted behavior. Unlike people, who can remove themselves from their environment or a stressful situation and choose to do something that helps them cope (such as exercise or go have a glass of wine), our pets do not have this level of control. They are counting on you to sense changes in their mood, habits and/or behavior...and to help them find ways to cope!

1. It is important that you try to identify the source of your pet's unusual behavior, in order to determine the best way to deal with it.
2. Don't hesitate to ask your veterinarian for advice.
3. You should also consult your veterinarian if the situation persists and the cause has not been identified.

What are pet parents saying?

"We were so happy when the vet recommended Zylkene for our dog, Nala (being afraid of other products that might harm her). She has not had much of an appetite from the moment she was in our house at 11 weeks until now, being almost 14 months. Furthermore, she was very restless during the night and hardly ever wanted to be hugged. This all changed after she took Zylkene for about 4 days."
